Site: Kayseri is a large and industrialized city in Central Anatolia, Turkey. The city of Kayseri, as defined by the boundaries of Kayseri Metropolitan Municipality, is structurally composed of five metropolitan districts, the two core districts of Kocasinan and Melikgazi and since 2004, also Hacılar, Incesu and Talas. In conjunction with the addition of new districts and first stage municipalities into the metropolitan area, the city's population is more than 1,000,000(one million).

Kayseri has been a continuous settlement since 3000 BC. The city has always been a vital trade center since it is located on major trade routes, particularly along what was called the Great Silk Road. One of the oldest cities founded in Anatolia, Kültepe, lies nearby.

Hill Sites: Ali Mt

Ali Mt has three hills. You can launch on all hills according to the wind direction. One of hill's altitude above sea level is 1750 m. Another hills altitude are above sea level 1700m. (Kayseri's altitude above sea level is 1100m) Generally wind direction is West and Northwest in the summer. 1700m hill and our launch area has barracks, electric, water, radio, 30 Car capacity Park and 2 man 2 Women WC. 1750 hill(Our reserve launch area) has barracks electric, water, radio and WC.

Transport to Kayseri : The city is served by Erkilet International Airport and the International Air Transport Association symbol for the airport is ASR. The airport is at a short distance from Kayseri center. There are several flights per day to Istanbul, Turkey's premium air transportation hub. Since the air transportation industry in Turkey is presently registering a fast growth rate, new flights from Kayseri to several other localities in Turkey and outside Turkey are soon to be expected.

Kayseri is connected to the rest of country with railroad service. There are four trains per day to Ankara. To the east there are two branches: one to Kars and Doğukapi toward Armenia and another to Tatvan on the west shore of Lake Van.

Since the city is located in central Turkey, transportation via cars and buses are highly efficient. It takes approximately 4 hours to reach Ankara and 45 minutes to Cappadocia. The symbol of the city, Mount Erciyes, which is a notable ski center in winters and a trekker's paradise in summers, is at only 30 minutes' drive from the city centre.

The transportation within the city relies mainly on buses, minibuses, and personal vehicles. A light rail transit system called Kayseray is under construction and is expected to open in one year.

Hospitals: Kayseri has big 2 government hospitals (Kayseri Government Hospital and Kayseri Erciyes University Medicine Faculty Hospital) and more than 20 Private Hospitals.
