

GAC PLENARY MEETING PALMA DE MALLORCA – SPAIN

Agenda Item 10.1 – Webmaster report

The FAI website is currently undergoing a major upgrade. At the time of this report the GAC section of the FAI website (GAC website) has been completely upgraded with the exception of the World Records and Awards sections. These parts of the GAC website upgrade is the current priority of the FAI.

The GAC webmaster has full control of most of the content of the website with some exceptions. The main sections we do not have control over are the World Records, Events Calendar, Delegates and Awards. The FAI webmaster updates these sections based on information supplied.

Over the past few months the information held on the GAC website has been brought up to date and the GAC website is now current. As an example, the invitation, registration forms and agenda for this meeting were placed on the website the day they became available.

For a website to have any value it must have current, interesting and relevant information. Up to now the information held on the GAC website has been minimal and out of date. For that reason the number of visitors has been limited.

In order for the GAC website to become more relevant it is important that any news and information gets sent through to the webmaster while it is current and relevant. We also have the ability to attach images to the website. For example, we could place a report on this meeting together with a photograph of the new GAC office bearers on the website as soon as this meeting is complete.

Another facility that is available to us on the GAC website is a “Frequently Asked Questions” (FAQ) section. We are currently looking at how this section should be populated.

There is a GAC email list maintained on the website. At this stage this email list is used only to communicate World Records. It should be used for other GAC communications.

We also need to generate the usage of the website by directing GAC members to the website. As an example, it could have been better to send local rules for international competitions to the webmaster so it could be added to the GAC website and then send an email out to all NACs informing them that the documents are available on the website.

I would like to appeal to all delegates to remember the website and submit information to me for publishing before, during and after international and national events. The success of the website depends on your input.
